THE STATE MILITANT.
Nothing, after the education of the people, contributes more to the security of a State than a thorough military system. The Federal Government, acting upon the instinct of preparing for war in time of peace, embodied this knowledge among the primary obligations of the citizen. Titusville Morning Herald.
INAUGURAL ADDRESS OF
GOV. JOHN W. GEARY,
Delivered January 13, 1867.

FELLOW-CITIZENS. Honored by the election of the sovereign people of my native State to the chief magistracy of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, it is with mingled feelings of humility and gratitude that I have appeared in the presence of my fellow-countrymen, and before the Searcher of all hearts, to take the solemn obligation prescribed as a qualification for that exalted station, "to support the Constitution of the United States and the Constitution of Pennsylvania, and to perform my official duties with fidelity."
Profoundly sensible of everything that is implied by this manifestation of the people's confidence, and aware of the magnitude and importance of the responsibilities of the office, then elected by its attendant honors, let it be our first grateful duty to return fervent thanksgivings to Almighty God for his constant providential numbering blessings to a people, and especially mine to uphold his aid and counsel in the discharge of civil trusts, who has been my shield and buckler amidst scenes of peril and death.

In addressing you on this occasion, in accordance with a custom originating with the Republican fathers, I propose briefly to express my opinion on such questions as concern our common constituency, and to relate to our common responsibilities.
Like countries in the Old World, our nation has had its internal convulsions. From the last of these we have scarcely yet emerged, and during which "Woe's desolation" passed over our land, leaving its victims to be buried in the graves of our commonwealth. Those who were the victims of these convulsions, whose people rebelled against the Government, and notwithstanding the agonizing sacrifices of a great civil war, the States that were severed from the Union, and the Union itself, have been preserved, have constantly advanced in honor, wealth, population and general prosperity.

This is the first time that a change has occurred in the Executive Department of the Government since the commencement of the war of the rebellion; a brief reference, therefore, to that conflict, and to its results, may not be unprofitable.
We have the consolation of knowing that the contest between the North and the South was not, on our part, for ambition, for military renown, for territorial acquisition, nor was it for a violation of any of the rights of the South, but it was for the preservation of our rights as a nation, and for the maintenance of justice, liberty and the Union. The object of the South was to destroy the Union, and the establishment of a confederacy based upon the principle of secession. To have submitted to this on our part, and to have shrunk from a manly resistance under such circumstances, would have been deeply and lastingly degrading, and would have destroyed the value of the sacrifices of our fathers and of the brave men of the present generation. The patriotic and Union-loving people felt that the alternative was that of life or death to the Union, and under the auspicious guidance of Abraham Lincoln, the blessing of firm who directs the destinies of nations, after open action and arbitrary violence on the part of the South, the appeal to arms was made. We had, just at this time, our citizens proving it with a degree of unanimity heretofore unknown, in this or any other country, left their various employments, their homes and all that was dear to them, and hastened with enthusiasm to the scene where duty and danger called, and to the sacred pledge of their unswerving love and fidelity to the Union, they unhesitatingly offered their lives for its preservation. Nor was any other tribute withheld in providing the means necessary for the support of our brave soldiers. Nearly two millions of soldiers entered the field from time to time on different terms of enlistment. The citizens generally exhibited the highest degree of patriotism in the prompt payment of taxes, in their liberal contributions to the war effort, and in the world was astonished by the amount expended in the benevolent care for the sick and wounded, through the agencies of the Sanitary and Christian Commissions, and the noble and generous spirit of the people, which has been manifested in the blood and withered with the bones of our heroes. To them we owe our victories, unsurpassed in brilliancy and the importance of their consequences. To the brave and noble soldiers, and to the brave and noble officers, and to the noble officers who commanded them.

I desire that it may be distinctly understood that I do not speak of myself in connection with this subject, but I am loath to avail myself of this opportunity to speak kind words of Pennsylvania's gallant private soldiers, and the noble officers who commanded them.
The generosity of the people of Pennsylvania to the Union soldiers has been limited, but not equalled, by other States. There is something peculiar in the loyalty of Pennsylvania. She seemed to feel, from the first, as if upon her devolved the task of a superior example. The fact that she carried upon her standard the brightest jewel of the Republic, that in her bosom was concealed the Declaration of Independence, gave to her contributions, in men and money, and her unparalleled charitable organizations, all the dignity and force of a model for others to copy. The rebel foe seemed to feel that if he could strike a fatal blow at Pennsylvania, he would recover all his losses, and establish a relentless prestige in the old world. But thanks to Divine Providence, and to the enduring bravery of our citizen soldiers, the nation of our beloved State shall live more closely to the cause of freedom.

The result of the battle of Gettysburg broke the power of the rebellion, and although the final issue was delayed, it was inevitable from the date of that great victory. That battle rekindled the other free States, and when the arch of victory was completed by Sherman's successful advance from the sea, so that the two conquerors could shake hands over the two fields that closed the war, the soldiers of Pennsylvania were equal glories in the glorious consummation.
No people in the world's history have ever been saved from so incalculable a calamity, and no people have ever had such cause for gratitude toward their benefactors. And here I cannot refrain from an expression of regret that the general Government has not taken any steps to inflict the proper penalties of the Constitution and laws upon the leaders of those who rudely and treacherously invaded the ever sacred soil of our State.
It is certainly a morbid clemency, and a deplorable forswearing, which fail to punish the greatest crimes "known to the laws of civilized nations," and may not the hope be reasonably indulged, that the Federal authorities will cease to extend unmerited mercy to those who inaugurated the rebellion and controlled the movements of its armies? If this be done, treason will be "rendered odious," and will be distinctly proscribed, and the pages of our future history that no attempt can be made with impunity to destroy our Republican form of government.

SOLDIERS' ORPHANS.
And while we remember "the soldier who has borne the battle," we must not forget

THE STATE MILITANT.
Nothing, after the education of the people, contributes more to the security of a State than a thorough military system. The Federal Government, acting upon the instinct of preparing for war in time of peace, embodied this knowledge among the primary obligations of the citizen. Yet the rebellion found us wholly unprepared. The first shock of arms found us equally unprepared and unorganized, and we very soon experienced that the contrivances of the great slave conspiracy had not only strengthened themselves by the stolen ships, arms and fortifications of the government, but had been for years systematically instructed in the science of war, and when they were ready to spring the secret of the rebellion, while the citizens, in whose hands the government was left, were compelled to protect

All sorts of... The consumption of... amount to a... quantity of 300,000,000...

A correspondent of the Scientific American says that as we ought to style a photograph a "photograph" and not a "photo"...

Decided Chinese, it is announced, will be the chief articles of export from California when the new steamship line between San Francisco and China is in operation. The line cannot be built in a foreign country.

A wedding took place the other night in Raleigh, among the "upper crust" of daydreams, at which the guests, receiving the usual cards of invitation, were requested to pay the entrance fee of $5, and after entering the charmed precincts were required to pay $5 more for refreshments. The money was turned over to the bride and groom, who had taken this method of raising money to start on their journey through life.

A Wisconsin official who had arrested a couple of rascals, was riding along with his prisoners, when a prairie chicken made its appearance and the officer drew his revolver and fired two or three shots at it. One of the prisoners suggested that he should be allowed to shoot the chicken, and the officer, who was a little bit of a sportsman, granted the request. The prisoner, however, did not try his skill on the chicken, but backed off, leaving the officer to cogitate on the "uncertainty of man," and to return home minus the prisoners and a revolver.

A little son of L. W. Beard, of Detroit, undertook to shave himself with a razor. He mounted a chair before a looking glass and shaved away at his cheeks and throat, cutting his face in several places. The razor was then handed to him. The prairie chicken, however, did not try his skill on the chicken, but backed off, leaving the officer to cogitate on the "uncertainty of man," and to return home minus the prisoners and a revolver.
